

HTML300 COURSE PROJECT PROPOSAL

As someone who enjoys cooking, I am always interested in discovering new ways to prepare or use foods I often already have in my kitchen. In particular, I enjoy learning about different ways to use eggs. They are a fairly inexpensive source of protein, and there is so much more you can do with them beyond standard breakfast dishes. Therefore, I would like to build a site that shares some of the ideas and recipes I've collected over the years that feature the egg. I feel this information would appeal to any other home cook who might be interested in getting a little more out of this simple — and versatile — ingredient.

The site will consist of 4 pages:

- > Home (with a brief intro)
- > How To
- > Know Your Egg
- > Recipe Search

Content for this site will include:

- > Basic descriptions of egg preparation methods
- > A few recipe suggestions for each of the methods described
- > Information on what different egg labels mean (organic, free range, etc.)
- > An option to do a recipe search based on a specific ingredient (eggs) using Spoonacular's API (<https://spoonacular.com/food-api>)
